

GPs put visits in fast lane

Sunday Mail 6 Aug 2006 - Paul Weston

The era of the traditional suburban doctor, who gave lengthy consultations and made after-hours house calls, is dying a slow death.

"One of the problems is, young people don't have many problems and older people have numerous problems."

"People don't die any more. They live on and on. We're running out of options for them."
