

Concern for ailing boomers

Courier Mail, January 14, 2002 - Maria Moscaritolo

Doctors are so concerned about the numbers of aging baby boomers that they want an urgent review of medical treatment delivery in nursing homes and hostels.

Better co-ordination is required with doctors and patients in nursing homes to ensure they get the care required.

Retirement can bring on new stress

Bulletin, Monday 14 January 2002 - David Bird

Gardening may be all the rage for today's retirees, but it is not the plan for the next generation, who want to get on the golf course, travel and eat out. Tomorrow's retirees plan to have a decent car, may be even two, and they're not too keen to spend time mowing the lawn.

Bosses prefer beauty to age and experience

Courier-Mail, January 2002 - Michelle Hele

Older women workers are sacked by bosses who prefer image to experience. In the past three months women over 50 accounted for 21% of Qld Working Women's Services clients with unfair dismissal claims.
